"To George F. Marion, the Best Stage Manager in the World"--Flo Ziegfeld; Carmel Actor Dips Into a Golden Past

By Irene Alexander

More than ever this year has the celebration of Thanksgiving been marked by a widening of the family circle. Few of the good things which life affords us here were hugged last week to an exclusive family bosom; they were brought out instead and given a heightened value by being shared.

In the mood of the season, then, this column present George Marion. Since 1932 he has been a prized Carmel possession and those of us who have witnessed the Mission pageants which he authored, produced and electrified by his own playing of the role of Junipero Serra, those of us who have sat in the audience at the Forest Theatre, moved to the point that our hands forgot to applaud his Shylock—"Hath not a Jew eyes . . .?" and those more fortunate ones who have sat with him in his study—among the mementoes of sixty-five full and active years in the theatre as one of America's most versatile and outstanding actors, directors and producers—to us, George Marion, his distinguished career, his unique and lovable personality, his never-ending pursuit of perfection, his strong, mobile face and unforgettable voice, are part and parcel of the good things which belong to Carmel life. It is time we shared a bit of what we know about him with our newcomers.

For unlike the artist who works through the medium of paint and canvas, of stone, of recorded word or musical note, the mimetic artist leaves no monument on which succeeding generations can gaze, but must live by the memory and the report of those who have seen and heard him.

Perhaps the most outstanding trait of George Marion is his patient, scholarly, almost reverent approach to the art in which he long since made himself one of the great masters.

"Has it not been a great pleasure to play?" one asks.

And quite surprisingly, indeed, he answers—this man who has held audiences without count in the hollow of his hand, of whom such a critic as John Metcalf wrote that to see and hear him was "such a joy that there is regret every time he leaves the stage"—after one of whose performances, long, long ago, in Omaha, Joseph Jefferson himself came back stage to utter words of appreciation which would have upset the equilibrium of anyone but the most ardent idealist.

"A pleasure? no," he answers slowly. "It is the greatest tragedy in the world. You are there on trial. To convey the idiosyncracies of human nature makes more demands than any other art. There is no possibility of realizing one's ambitions. The art is always superior to the utmost that any one actor can bring to it, in study, in observation, in experience. Many a time I have come off

Firemen Defy Mayor and City Council; Pass Vote of Confidence in Torras

Carmel, California
November 13, 1943

WHEREAS Chief Vincent Torras has been an active member in good standing of this department for over sixteen years, serving as assistant Chief for several years and appointed as Chief by the City Council in 1941, and

WHEREAS the efficiency and morale of this department has been maintained at a high standard under his administration, whereof the record speaks for itself,

Therefore be it RESOLVED that we, the members of the Carmel Fire Department go on record as expressing our full confidence in the ability and leadership of our Chief Vincent Torras, and be it

FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of this resolution be sent to the City Council

Respectfully submitted,
John Black
Secretary

By WILMA COOK

The city council has projected itself into a strictly private feud within the Volunteer Fire Department and from all appearances, the city council is about to get its fingers burned. Which is the just fate of outsiders who interfere in family fights.

What puts several of the council members farther and farther out on a limb is the fact that much of their meddling was without authority because hush-hush meetings of the council are strictly out of bounds and can give official sanction to nothing that the members undertake as a result.

Whether the volunteer firemen are aware that considerable of the action that has nettled them is strictly from nothing from a parliamentarian point of view, we do not know. But this is certain, they know they have this ace in the hole and they intend to use it: they can walk out to a man if the city council "doesn't go back to its council table and get the hell out of the firehouse."

Of course, you can't blame the council in a way. It requires almost inhuman self-control to keep out of a fight in Carmel and this was such a beautiful fight involving even the ladies of the Red Cross.

Months and months now gone by, Councilman Fred Mylar, who is also assistant fire chief, with the best intentions in the world and thoroughly bad judgment, invited the first aid group of the Red Cross to hold practice meetings up in the fire house club room.

It looked all right on the surface, but one of the engine drivers, (the other was already sore at Mylar for what he considered an excession of authority on another occasion) objected strenuously on the grounds that:

1. It was all right to hold first aid practice downstairs in the fire house but not in their club room upstairs with its highly polished floor which they wore their fingers to the bone to keep in a glowing state of waxed perfection.

2. The Red Cross already had a good place to practice putting splints on compound fractures at the Church of the Wayfarer.

3. If Mylar had to invite the ladies to hold their first aid practices upstairs, he could darn well clean up after them himself.

Which Mylar was willing enough to do. So far the fight was within the sacred confines of the fire house and no damage done, but observe:

One of the Red Cross ladies tattled to the mayor.

Instead of by-passing the affair as he has done so gracefully with several really important matters, the mayor went off half cocked in his endearing deep-south manner and said that the fire house was a public building and if Assistant Fire Chief Mylar wanted to invite the Red Cross to hold its first aid meetings upstairs, downstairs or in my lady's chamber, who was the engine driver to say him nay! Unfortunately, the mayor overlooked the fact that the firemen feel that the decision as to what

Two Programs Offered Public By Carmel Schools

Two entertainments are to be offered to the public by the Carmel schools during the holiday season, Jaffrey Harris presenting the combined orchestras from both schools in a program at Sunset school auditorium Friday, December 10th at 11 o'clock, and Miss Alberta Beeson, presenting a combined Sunset and high school cast in a Christmas play on the last day of school, December 22.

The latter "Why the Chimes Rang," is a miracle play based on an old French legend and includes in the cast, the two school choirs. Miss Lucile Burtis and her art class are in charge of designing the set and Ernest Calley in charge of construction.

Salvage Chairman Asks Co-operation Of Carmel People

By JOHN GILBERT

There is urgent need for tin cans and war industries can use more than are being turned in. The bins at the Post Office are there to enable the people of Carmel to help supply this need. They are not there to be used as a dump or an auxiliary to the garbage can. They are to be used only for properly prepared cans. If in the future Carmel is called upon to collect other salvage material notice to that effect and instructions will be published in the papers and posted on the bulletin board in front of the bins.

To be shipped and processed, cans must be properly prepared, that is rinsed out, both ends removed and flattened. If this is not done they cannot be accepted for shipment and in the past the presence of unprepared tin cans has caused several truck loads of cans from Carmel to be thrown

State Attorney To Assist in Von Urban Trial

Allen Martin, trial attorney from the State Attorney General's office will assist in the prosecution of Rudolph Von Urban, Charles McHarry, Deputy district attorney in charge, announced yesterday.

Von Urban, consulting "psychologist" to the county juvenile court goes on trial charged with practicing medicine without a license next Tuesday in Judge Ray Baugh's court in Monterey.

The complaint was sworn out by J. W. Williams, special agent for the board of medical examiners under the state department of professional and vocational standards.

Current Water Color Show in Gallery Has Much to Offer in Variety and Interest for Christmas Shoppers

By Patricia Cunningham

The current show at the art gallery does credit to the hanging committee, Myron Oliver in charge. Each painting is placed in just the right place and light to show off its peculiar excellences and to enhance the one next to it. If anyone thinks that the hanging of a show is anything but an art in itself, he should try it.

Certain of these pictures would stand out for attention in any show anywhere. Lee Tevis' Carmelite Convent, Roy Martin's River Mouth and Poker Players are in this class. Each of these is a prime example of the unique sparkling transparency pertinent to the water color medium. They exploit the expressive possibilities of the laying on of washes to a most satisfying degree.

Sam Colburn has a remarkable effect of natural sunlight. He has developed a very personal manipulation of interweaving color areas that every now and then has this stunning effect. Lee Tevis' misty blues produce a persuasive mood that is just the right key for her subjects, rocks and sea and distant convent nestling against the great hills. Royden Martin's venture into darker and richer color values is impressively beautiful. I mention these paintings especially because when you go to a water color show you naturally seek prime examples of the medium, and these are they.

This is not to say that many other of the works here, both in water color and other mediums, are not equally delightful in their own way and just as appealing although boasting less technical perfection.

Lucile Burtis' Carmel Valley is a lovely interpretation of one of the more thrilling views of the valley. In this she fulfills the promise that is so often in her things of a fine architectual sense in color and form. Her blues and greens are keyed to a harmonious screen of values and tones that is decorative and plastic at the

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Cadet Corps Appointments

Appointments were made by Mr. Getsinger for positions in the Carmel High School Cadet Corps. The highest rank so far given to any Cadet is that of Cadet First Lieut. It was received by Everett May. These are the other promotions that were also made: Cadet First Sergeant: Bob Hendricks, Cadet Staff Sergeant: Dean Rains, Cadet Sergeants: Arnold Pilling, George Moller, Cadet Corporals Dick Uzzell, Mast Wolfson, Martin Erwin, Del Wermuth, Jim Campbell, Jim Snavely. Several duty assignments were also made.

The Red Cross drive of Carmel Hi brought a profit of over one hundred and thirty dollars; thanks to Arnold Pilling, chairman, and Mary Gregory, publicity chairman, and those working under them.

Three games were given to raise money, the sum of which totaled close to fifty dollars. These were as follows: Block C boys against Mohawks—the Block C was the winner, Block C boys against Block C girls—The Mohawks against picked groups of girls—Mohawks were winners. The drive started November first and ran for two weeks, ending November 15. One last, big entertainment will be given to try to reach $150. The date has not been set, but it is to be soon.

Mary Had A Little Pup

"Oh! Isn't she cute!" "Where did you get it, Mary Jane?" "May I hold her?" "Isn't she just darling?" The center of all this chit chat was a tiny, brown and white three months old pup. Not of royal blood, but definitely getting enough attention for a king. After much discussion it was decided she's three-fifths Boston Bull Terrier, two-fifths Mexican Chahuahua and one-fifth Siberian Husky. The name of this charming individual, at the present, is Zero, who, duly initiated the journalism class into all the tricks of puppyhood just before the bell rang.

The School Annual

Coach Rudd, advisor for the Year-book, called a meeting of the annual committees this week. A new editor, Carla Lepori, was appointed, and her assistant editors are Frank Gambee and Jack Fremont. The editor appointed the following to her staff: Business Manager, Jim Boylan; Advertising, Russell Bohlke, and as his assistant, Howard Lockwood; Classes, Betty Powell; Armed Services, Jo An Thorne; Photography, Bob Holm; Art Editor, Martin Irwin; Sports, Del Wilson, and Secretary, Mary Jane Reel. The annual is now underway under these new committees and with the support of the student body and the merchants in town the students hope to put across a good Yearbook.

Museum Trip

Miss Sener's two biology classes crowded and squeezed into the Pacific Grove bus going to the museum to get as much information on Monterey county birds as possible. Birds happened to be only a small part of what the class ran into, such as this comforting fact: Did you know that the Monterey Peninsula is comparatively safe during earthquakes due to granite ledges? Or that swallows have been clocked as flying 185 miles per hour?

Mrs. Toresa Lloyd, the curator, said that now is the time to see the different types of sea birds. Monterey county's geographical position is such that all birds migrating pass through this county. If you'd like to see something truly rare you might catch a glimpse of some American Oyster Catchers which are here at Cypress Point or Point Lobos. One student said, after a worried glance at all the cases and cases of stuffed birds, that she did not know where to begin and she could never remember them all. Mrs. Lloyd advised taking four birds at the beginning, learning them thoroughly and then take up four more, to avoid getting all mixed up. One very good thing about the trip was that the students were able to wander about and observe freely. They saw tarpit fossils, pink, green, yellow, white, blue, black and orange sands collected from all over the world.

An old flag made before 1794, and some tiny Chinese women's shoes, hardly more than two and a half inches in length. To get back to the birds, the Cedar Wax Wing is called that because he has wax ducts and, by the way, is the only bird that sings in the rain. The end of the Carmel River is a perfect place to watch bunches of snowy Plovers, as many as six hundred in a bunch. The Pacific Grove golf links is a marvelous place for catching glimpses of land birds.

Another nice thing about this museum is that you don't have to tramp down miles of corridors all in line, as you do in city schools.

Water O.K. Says Dr. Kenneth Sheriff

To reassure the local people suffering from intestinal disturbances who attribute their discomfort to the water supply, Dr. Kenneth C. Sheriff, Monterey County Health Officer made a statement to the press this week to the effect that, "this concern is entirely groundless, and every precaution possible is taken to insure the safety and purity of the water supplied to the homes in this area.

"Chlorine is applied to the water at the impounding dam and again as the water leaves the Forrest Lake Reservoir where it enters the distribution system. In addition to this safeguard, a careful laboratory control is maintained over the supply at all times. Twenty-one bacteriological tests are made each week by the Carl Wilson Laboratory in Los Angeles and chemical analyses are also made frequently by this same laboratory. The Monterey County Health Department makes twelve bacteriological examinations each month from samples of water collected throughout the system. Moreover the California Water and Telephone Company and the County Health Department are continually striving to insure the safety of the water supplied and because of this careful supervision, the public can be assured of its purity."

AWVS Asks for Help In Blind Project

The American Women's Voluntary Services, working in cooperation with and under the guidance of the county, has undertaken a new project for the welfare of Monterey county's thirty-five blind wards.

An appeal is being made this week for volunteer helpers among the women of Carmel who have had training or experience in working with the blind. Those willing to contribute their services in this cause should register without delay at A.W.V.S. headquarters in La Giralda building on Dolores street.

"We're pulling the heaviest loads in history, using every locomotive our railroad owns or can borrow. We're short of trained men, too. To avoid disappointment, better plan on spending Christmas at home."

In normal years the Christmas season is a jolly time on the railroad. Package-laden travelers bound for family reunions fill our trains.

We railroaders have fun carrying people on holiday journeys, and we hate to disappoint a single ticket seeker . . . but this war year we really have no room for pleasure travelers.

Service men on holiday furloughs, relatives traveling to meet them, military personnel in organized groups, business men in war work—these people now have first call on our facilities.

This means that, unless you must travel, you'll be wise NOT to try the train. We hope there'll come a Christmas soon when our message can be different!

A Trip to Baguio

Early in the morning, Ah Chung, my Chinese amah, awakened me and told me that we were going to Baguio. I got up and dressed and ate breakfast. Then we got into the car and started on our way.

At first as we went out of Manila the roads were very good, in fact, some of them had six lanes.

I was so young then that I do not remember how long the good roads lasted but I do remember that most of the roads to Baguio were bad. The bridges were of the modern type but because of the constant floods they were mostly washed out.

When we were on the bad roads the picturesque scenery began; native huts on stilts with pigs and chickens underneath and a caribou cart pulled by a big caribou wearing a ring in his nose. We came to a little native village with a store and lots of huts and children playing around the houses.

Then another stretch of open road—"Bang"—I jumped off the seat. We had a blow-out, a very common thing on those bad roads. Luckily we were near a town so we kept on going until we reached it. Just as we were stopping a small car with some Filipinos in it came limping in. When we stopped they came over to watch us change our tire. Soon it was fixed and we started on our way again.

The road was going through more wooded country now and as we passed a clearing with a hut in it. I looked up to see an airplane. It was a small plane of the Manila-Baguio Line.

A little farther on we came to a bridge that had been washed out by a storm but the river was almost completely dry now, except for a little stream in the middle and some puddles. We had to ford the stream to get across, so we started down the bank and crossed the gravel bottom of the river bed. We splashed through one of the puddles and the stream, then went over the gravel on the other side, up the bank and on our way again. We passed a herd of caribou being driven to water.

After a while the country became rougher; we were getting into the mountains. I do not remember much about this part of the trip, so I suppose it wasn't very interesting. Now we came on the roughest part of the trip. We were winding up a small paved road with a canyon on one side and the wooded mountain slope on the other. The scenery was very beautiful and once in a while we saw mountain natives trudging up the road carrying baskets. On and on we went winding up the road. After what seemed like hours and hours we reached the top. After a bit more driving we passed houses; then turning into the drive we drove up the hill and stopped. We were at the Benguet House in Baguio.

Frank Sheridan

Frank Sheridan, for many years a colorful and well-loved participant in Carmel's community life following a long and distinguished career on the American stage, died in Hollywood on Thursday, November 25, at the age of 75.

A native of Boston, he served his apprenticeship as an actor in the various stock companies of that city, acquiring the technical skill in his chosen profession which carried him later into the top rank as leading man in scores of Broadway productions and in the great touring companies sent throughout the country by the Frohmans, Klaw and Erlanger and other noted producers. As star in the New York production of Paid in Full, he made a lasting name for himself in the annals of the American theatre.

While still actively engaged in the theatre, he established the John Franklin Music company, which published, among other sheet music, the hit song, Marquita.

He came to Carmel in the '20s on a visit, remaining to purchase a considerable amount of property here and elsewhere on the Peninsula and establish a home for himself and his family. Later he moved to Hollywood where he engaged in film work and compiled a book about his theatrical memories. Two years ago his life was saddened by the death of his only son, John, who had postponed his own promising stage career to work in an airplane factory, where he met with a fatal accident.

Frank Sheridan is survived by his wife, Edna Sheridan.

Council Passes Over Protests But Lightly

Six protests against charges on the tax bills for lot cleaning in 1942 were disposed of at a special meeting of the city council Tuesday evening with the assurance of the city attorney that the city clerk was within his legal rights in placing such charges on the assessment roll.

Protest receiving the greatest attention was that of Alton H. Walker who objected to paying $22.00 for lot clearance in that the work had been done in 1942 when the property was in the possession of another owner. The council instructed the city clerk to get in touch with the former owner to see if she would pay the bill.

Protests of P. S. Edmonds, Chicago, that "the charge of $33.00 for cleaning off these lots seems to be an awful lot of money"; of Mrs. Hildreth Hare that the charge of $11.00 was "out of all reason" and of Jack Montgomery acting for Johannes Reimers that $24.75 seemed excessive; Mrs. Amelia K. Burnham, who wasn't happy about a charge of $103 for clearing her lot, and Harry Tanous who had bought the property since the clearance of the lot, were passed over by the council with a vote of thanks to Fire Marshall Robert Leidig for his "untiring and unselfish activities in fire prevention."

Hearing of protests was preceded by the reading of a resolution drawn up by City Attorney Peter Ferrante as a memorial to the late Argyll Campbell, former Carmel city attorney. —W. C.

Firemen Defy Mayor And City Council

outsiders should hold what meetings in their club room rests with their chief, not with the assistant chief, the mayor, or the little guy with the green hat who lives around the corner.

The matter continued to simmer with a great deal more official attention than was wise or justified until it reached such ridiculous proportions that the city council met with the volunteer fire department in a body and suggested that the bad engine drivers and the volunteer firemen could only make things right with the ladies of the Red Cross by inviting them please, please to come back and hold their meetings in their highly polished club room. Which the engine drivers and the volunteer firemen were damned if they would do.

This state of impasse might have continued indefinitely if the engine drivers had not become aware of the painful rise in the cost of living and the fact that Pacific Grove engine drivers were getting $165 a month while they, the Carmel engine drivers, were getting only $145 a month. They asked for a raise, and in so doing gave the city council what it thought was a big club to beat the recalcitant firemen into subjugation, because the city council approved forthwith Councilman L. L. Dewar's cagey idea that the engine drivers should be made to sign a "pledge of cooperation" with the city council before they got their raise.

The engine drivers said that they had given their pledge of cooperation to the fire department when they joined up twenty-eight and twenty-four years ago respectively and that they didn't see any need of signing any such pledge to the city council now, especially since no employee in any other city department was required to sign pledges of co-operation.

They felt that the pledge of cooperation put them under divided authority whereby they would have to take orders from the city council, the assistant chief, as well as the chief—probably conflicting orders. Heretofore they had been responsible to their chief only, and he in turn responsible to the city council, an arrangement that had worked out well enough. So they refused to sign the pledge of cooperation and the volunteer firemen backed them up.

For this insurrection, the mayor addressed a letter to Fire Chief Vincent Torras criticising him for his lack of "discipline" in his department and implying lack of efficiency in handling his job. This letter the entire volunteer fire department resented. They resented it so hotly that they called a special meeting and passed the resolution that is boxed in the middle of page one. They passed it without a single "no" vote and mailed it to the City Clerk to be read at the next meeting of the city council.

As the Pine Cone goes to press Councilman L. L. Dewar is slated to meet with the governing board of the fire department to see if some "compromise" can be worked out before Wednesday night's meeting of the city council. What compromise is possible is a question. Matters have reached a point where the city council must make up its mind whether the fire chief is going to run the fire department, or whether the councilmen and the assistant fire chief are going to run the department. If they reach the latter decision, they will find themselves without a fire department to run for the boys are saying that "If the Chief goes, we go."

The city council will do well not to lose sight of the fact that the volunteer firemen can get along very nicely without the city council, but the city council will find itself in a very embarrassing position without any volunteer firemen, and with no better excuse to offer to the citizens for leaving the town without fire protection other than that they meddled—neither wisely nor too well.

Here is a tip to our armed forces:

Now that we have the Gilberts in our possessions, I can't see why the Sullivans all can't get together, dress up in their Pinafores and, like the Pirates of Penzance, go on a cruise and take the Mikado!

And here is still another tip that I pass on to the California Water and Telephone Co.:

A young lady recently told me that when she was about to take a bath in a beautiful bubbling pool situated in her yard, surrounded by tree, there, there, and there; that all of a sudden a wood nymph hopped from behind a fern and handed her this poem which had been inscribed upon a lily pad. Here it is:

What is this green, the mossy taste
That makes me think of frogs?
A dash of lime
A hint of slime
A whiff of rotten logs
You need not ask me twice, my dear,
For this, my darling daughter,
I know it well
Just by the smell,
Why this is Carmel Water!

Question Session To Follow Talk

Residents of the Peninsula are showing great interest in the forthcoming appearance in Carmel of Mr. Nat Peiper, Pacific Coast Head of the F.B.I. Mr. Peiper will speak on "Present Day Crime Problems" on Thursday, December 9th, at 8 p.m. at the Sunset school auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Carmel P.T.A.

Following his speech Mr. Peiper will answer any questions asked by the audience on local crime or delinquency problems. Every community in these difficult times, has some such problems to contend with and it is a rare opportunity to be able to discuss them with a man of Mr. Peiper's capabilities, and to learn of their causes and what measures have been taken elsewhere to prevent them.

Carmel audiences are well known for their cooperation and it is assured that this will be an informative and well attended affair. —S. L. C.

George Koch's Point Lobos has his characteristic strongly poetic feeling. This time he dramatizes his rocks and seagulls in a well-worked out compositional plan that is uniquely suitable to the size and paint medium, which looks like a gauche or tempera.

If you want a flower piece to give charm to a room that needs brightening, Margaret Levick's painting of flowers is the perfect answer.

Then there are Calla Lilies and Yuccas by Laura Maxwell, and Fuschias by Stella Clay. Martin Baer's Gladiolus and Blue Iris are in the realm of fantasy and have a vitality that gives these small paintings monumental significance. This kind of tour de force is always fascinating to see.

This brings us to what will seem to many the most provocative picture in the show, Marjorie Doolittle's Still Life. It is a highly successful modeling of the pure space of the picture plane and speaks a visual language that may, at first, be strange to those who are addicted to a more literal style of painting. But since it incorporates the principles of great painting rediscovered by the modern experimenters it is well worth a little unprejudiced study. Now names such as Cezanee, Van Gogh, Seurat and their ilk are like notes on a great gong ringing down the corridors of the history of highest cultural achievements of mankind. Neglected and scored in their day, now they are virtually deified and their works priceless, their value established for all time. While they were alive, no one had the time or the patience for the visual language which they spoke. Fadisms and easier enjoyments intrigued the day. Now the popular gods of that time are gathering the dust of oblivion that will soon obliterate even the memory of their names. It would seem that the easiest enjoyments are rarely the best—in art, at least.

There are a wealth of local scenes in the show. M. De Neale Morgan, Percy Gray, William Watts, E. N. Hart, Kay Rodgers, are responsible for the pastels, temperas, and water colors of all the different kinds of Monterey landscape. The Christmas shopper should find many of his problems solved in this selection.

This exhibition will be on view until January 13. The gallery is open every day except Monday from two to five in the afternoon.

Only One Showing Of "Bertha" This Week End

"Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl" goes into its third week-end this Saturday evening, December 4, at the First Theatre, Monterey. "Bertha" will play Saturday evening only this week.

Last week brought many out-of-town patrons to see the popular Troupers, and almost one hundred disappointed fans were turned away from "Bertha." The small seating capacity of the First Theatre is bringing about increasing numbers of advance reservations, out-of-town orders frequently coming in for three weeks ahead.

Ella Englund

Ella Kulitz Englund, widow of the late Marshall Gus Englund, died recently in the San Jose hospital to which she was removed from her Carmel home, following a short illness.

A native of Germany, she was brought to the United States when an infant, and following her marriage to Gus Englund, came in 1907 to live in Monterey, during his eight years' term as chief of police there. After serving as guard during the 1915 Exposition in San Francisco, Gus Englund became the one-man police force of Carmel, a post which he held until 1935 when ill health forced his retirement, a short while before his death.

Mrs. Englund made her home in Carmel for the past twenty-five years. She is survived by a son, Walter Albright, veteran of U. S. Navy service in World War I, and two grandsons, Glen and Harold Albright, all of Carmel. Harold Albright, now serving as a seaman first class in the Navy, arrived home on Monday for a brief leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moore returned to their Carmel home early in the week after spending eight days in San Francisco.

NEW SAN FRANCISCO GALLERY

By Frank M. Moore

The gallery up in the pent house on the 19th floor of 133 Geary St., an uncommon meeting ground for the California artist who wishes to sell and the public who want to purchase, is giving San Franciscans a new jolt, and, from the attendance the opening week, they like it.

We enter the gallery through an open court in which is displayed the sculpture, one of the pieces being a beautiful torso by E. Bruce Douglas, who formerly resided in Carmel. The gallery is divided into sections, the left hand consisting of a main exhibition room, two smaller ones for prints and small canvases, an office, attractively furnished, business like yet cosy in atmosphere and several storage and utility rooms. The right hand section is occupied by Jean Turner's Art School, where both fine arts and commercial arts are being taught.

When we looked in, one of the instructors was holding a class in lettering. There were several examples also of fashion plate drawing.

One of the students was already employed on a part time newspaper job.

In the exhibition rooms we immediately felt at home when we saw several of our Carmel artists showing their work alongside the Bay area men and some from the south, all excellent examples of their special talent.

Also some fine bits of the old world as painted by that talented artist, Jules Pages. The paintings are all of small or medium size, within the pocketbook and wall space of an average home.

The American Artists Professional League is a national association of artists, sculptors, illustrators and etchers and the California Chapter, headed by E. Bruce Douglas and Paul Williamson has taken a leap forward toward the practical by opening this gallery in the heart of the down town shopping and business district. It is logical, therefore, that these two men with close connections with the business world in San Francisco, should be emphasizing the importance of bringing in some of the business men of such organizations as the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Several informal meetings of their members has already been held in the galleries and these men have been enthusiastic in their appreciation of the objectives of the gallery.

They are asking to become lay members and they seem to feel that it is a new and valuable enterprise which San Francisco should and will encourage. This is largely due to the quality of the two men who have courageously taken the initiative in opening such a gallery.

The art situation in San Francisco for a number of years has been very confusing, to say the least, to the public at large. There has always been the small group who have, since the advent of Atrocity Art, tried to tell the world that "This is IT" and have spoken so loudly thereof that the artists have become discouraged from even attempting to exhibit their rational canvases, and the public equally discouraged from purchasing anything. It has become so intolerable that even some of the art critics have of late berated the ultra modern juries and have been more than fair in their critiques of the rational exhibits.

This gallery does not offer its space to hobbyists, but professional painters and sculptors only and membership therein is largely by invitation.

The membership requirements are high quality of work and saleability.

Altogether, we feel that the California artists are to be congratulated on having an opportunity to show their work under such cheerful yet dignified surroundings and reach an audience of business men who rarely, if ever, attend a regular art exhibit.

POETRY

FOURTH NOCTURNE

Moonlight down on a strangely placated ocean, agleam on the detail of this ship;
the same silver palm that is soothing the sea touches our steel muzzles, dallies along the cables with a feline curiosity.
Pouring in fountains through the rock arches of the Farallones;
flooding up from the great mouth of Monterey bay;
screening and sheening and kissing the water—
a lullaby of subdued opal . . .
The same old gold that clots the night shadows of Sycamores,
the same pearl flesh of your breast . . .
Now dancing like warm spray above the plates of the engine room,
now swirling a dolphin's breath in our wake.

—D. L. Emblen, U.S.N.

CHINESE VILLAGE

No steel-grooved wheels
That hesitate, straining to the hills—
No measured rows of lights.
A pebble-city,
Feather-quiet in the night—
An island in a sea of rice-fields,
With pagodas as protecting angels
On the distant mountain peaks.
Curve-point roof-corners
To frighten evil spirits—
Candleberry trees moon-etched
Against the sky,
And only the shuffle-sound
Of cloth-held feet, straw sandals,
And the single notes of flutes
Sculpturing the night.

—Dorothy Loosley

STAINED-GLASS WINDOW

Perhaps
in some old gray cathedral lies the answer . . .
why sorrows always overwhelm
the small, fine bits of ecstasy; and why the drops of beauty are so lost in this dark sea of never knowing why.

It may be that through some matchless age-old window
drifts the light to shade another dream,
To lend new faith to start the halting voice, knowing, then, the words to say,
and how to say them . . .

REVIEWS

SILVA DANCED "SOLOMON LEVI"

By Eloise Carwyle

Reading Irene Alexander's delightful interview with Mr. Silva in a recent Pine Cone-Cymbal, I was transported to the land of my childhood—back into the old South.. I was again one of three very little girls sitting on the veranda steps waiting for "Mr. Tibba" (William Silva) to go by. We were sure to receive a gay and affectionate greeting from him, and we loved it. It was worth waiting for.

A few years pass, and it is the gatherings of the summer colony at Cravens Terrace on Lookout Mountain that I recall most vividly—the birthday parties, the picnics, the holiday celebrations, and the Sunday evening song service, when the entire neighborhood, irrespective of creed, came together to sing the fine old hymns and to listen reverently while Mr. Lynde read evening prayer, an unforgettable rhythmic flow of beautiful Elizabethan English. Song service was almost the best of all. And there was the going home afterward in the wondrous moonlit summer night, down the long "white road," its crushed white rock lying like snow in December starlight.

But of the holiday celebrations none was quite so glamorous as the Fourth of July. Weeks before, we began to think about it and talk about it and plan for it. We knew there would be visitors from the city, and that would add to the gayety. The day was awaited with an almost painful expectancy.

The celebration would be held at the old Cravens House where long, wide verandas provided ample space for the supper tables and for the dancing. Consultations were held by the ladies regarding the picnic supper, to insure variety. Otherwise it might turn out to be all cake and pickles.

Fireworks were selected and laid aside with care. For once we rejoiced over a dark night; there would be no moon to challenge the magic of firelight. Cilla, our darky maid (short for Priscilla) was reminded to fill the lantern with oil and be sure the chimney was clean and bright.

On the great day, at the hour of sunset, small groups carrying covered baskets, and an oil lantern, might be seen emerging from amid the trees, wending their way toward the "white road," which led to the famous old house built, in large part, before the Civil War.

Supper was served on the south veranda, which opened into the garden where were the wonderful cherry trees, remarkable for great size and fine fruit, and so old that the story of their planting and of the eventful passing years was told with pride to the interested visitor.

After supper, the verandas soon filled with dancers, slim young lovely things in diaphanous gowns floating back and forth in the summer night with fine upstanding young partners. But the eyes of the visitor from a faraway land were turned again and again to the scene below—a fairy city, it seemed, all agleam with sparkling light, glowing in beauty, without agitation or glare.

At last it was time for the fireworks. Skyrockets ascend and break into showers of colored light, to the ohs! and ahs! of delighted children. Roman candles are set off, and there is popping of firecrackers. They allow us to hold a pinwheel, and we find it fascinating—so delicate and swift and various; and we beg for another.

When the last spark had lighted the night sky and there was nothing left to burn, the whole company gathered in the drawing room for a final "sing," which included all the patriotic songs. Some of us were descendends of Confederate officers; some thought with pride of forebears who wore uniforms of blue; but we all joined in singing lustily our beloved stage to receive the felicitations of those who crowded my dressing room, only to rush out into the night thanking God for the narrow margin by which I had escaped failure."

"To George F. Marion, the Best Stage Manager in the World"--Flo Ziegfeld; Carmel Actor Dips Into a Golden Past

George Marion was born in San Francisco of a Slavonian father and a mother of Irish parentage but herself a native of the mountains of Maryland. Something in that family heritage must have been peculiarly sensitive to the atmosphere of San Francisco's Golden Age of the theatre for during their boyhood, in the '70's, all five of the Marion brothers—John, George, James, Sam and Dave, responded to its call.

"As youngsters," George Marion chuckles," we were all so fascinated by play-acting, and especially dancing, that we used to go over on Fremont street after the iron foundries had closed and practice steps there on the deserted pavement until eleven o'clock at night. Then when we got a little bolder we'd go into the 'free and easies' where there was a piano and try out."

The first essays at performance were in pantomime. The great Ravels, who had brought the pantomime to a high state of perfection, had departed from San Francisco, and their mantle had descended upon Paul Martinelli, with whom the Brothers Marion made their first public appearance in farce and pantomime at Woodward's Gardens.

"And great training it was, too," declares George Marion, "when one had to practice telling a whole story with facial expression and bodily movement alone."

Later there were performances with Emerson's minstrels. Three of the five Marion boys went on to win laurels for themselves in the theatre: John, under the name of Jean Vampire, Sam as a talented dancer, and George, to scale the heights. James deserted the stage to become a Dominican brother. Their only sister, Frances, entered the convent at seventeen, and for many years has been a member of the teaching staff at Dominican College in San Rafael.

George's first trip East was made in '79, but by that time he had played numerous roles in the companies of all the great actors who came out to San Francisco to make of that era one long, rich, dramatic feast.

"Today," he mourns, "the young actor has no such golden advantage. It was a novitiate, during which the beginner played subordinate roles, and in the company of great actors, learned humbly to watch their methods, to strive for self-improvement, always face to face with the standard of older, experienced players. Now, when there are no longer stock companies, youth is matched with youth. The method of advancing slowly, through an apprenticeship from small parts to great ones, is no longer possible. It is only experience which produces certainty. Work done in uncertainty is bad work."

And to understand the infinite pains with which George Marion fortified himself against uncertainty during his more than a half century in the theater, one has only to browse through what he calls his book room in his home on Carmelo street. Here, lining the walls from floor to ceiling, two and three deep on the shelves, are the volumes through which he has sought, minutely, the mental, the spiritual, the physical understanding and interpretation of each individual human being he has portrayed in all that time.

To understand, too, the value and scope of his early San Francisco apprenticeship, one needs only to glance through the congress of players with whom he associated in the glorious '70's at the old California Theatre, then under the management of Barrett and McCullough: Mary Anderson, Tom Keene, Robson and Crane, Lotta Crabtree, Charles Fechter, Edwin Booth, Barry Sullivan, Maurice Barrymore, James O'Neill, Emily Melville, Clara Morris, Fanny Davenport, and scores of others whose names are equally lustrous.

In '79, then, with a grounding in pantomime, minstrels and three-act drama, George Marion set out for the East, where his first appearance was in Chicago, as Launcelot Gobbo in the Merchant of Venice at the Grand Opera House. In the years which followed his contributions to the theatre were many and varied. In '88 and '89, he was a member of Lew Dockstader's Minstrels, acting and writing monologues and afterpieces for the company. For three years he was with Charles Hoyt, staring in The Brass Monkey. There were two seasons with Frohman's Comedians and sixteen or more roles in the melodramas of Davis and Keogh. For two years he was the director of the noted stock companies at the Boston Museum. It was George Marion who directed the early plays of Henry Savage — such plays as George Ade's The College Widow, and thirty-one Ziegfeld successes, including the Paris and London productions of The Prince of Pilsen; Ann Held in The Little Duchess; The Sultan of Sulu; The Merry Widow, Spring Maid, and others which remained long in public memory. A gold watch, gift of Florenz Ziegfeld, is inscribed, "To George F. Marion, the best stage manager in the world."

His skilled touch brought to life such dramas as Madame X, Blue Grass, Everywoman, Excuse Me, and such operettas as Natoma and the first English production of Madame Butterfly. Of his acting during all these years, critics have written acres of eulogy, dubbing him the most versatile player on the American stage. Yet for twenty-five years he took each summer a busman's holiday through the great centers of dramatic art in Europe, studying the methods and techniques of their famed players.

When he toured with Pauline Lord in Eugene O'Neill's Anna Christie, creating his never-to-be-forgotten role of the Swedish barge captain, one London critic wrote: "The other critics have told us all about George Marion's stage work. Of his private personality it is only possible to speak in terms of positive affection. I am not holding any particular brief for this fine play, but I hope it will run a year at the Strand, if only to assure that I shall be meeting George Marion now and again during the next twelve months."

No small part of the affection which George Marion won unfailingly from his audiences stemmed, one can be certain, from his deep conviction that an audience which gathers to hear an actor expressing human emotion is paying too great a compliment to be treated lightly. It deserves, he insists, the best that any self-respecting artist can delve deep within himself to give.

While George Marion has been living quietly in the Carmel home to which he sent his daughter Ruth from Rome and his son George from Lausanne to peace and safety in 1917, and to which he and Mrs. Marion, the former Adelaide Orton of musical comedy fame, returned in 1932 after several years in Hollywood, he has by no means relinquished his active interest in the theatre. Many an amateur Carmel production has profited by his professional aid and advice. Many a young actor has been helped by his expert coaching. But long hours of each day are sacred to the work on which he has been engaged for many years—a book filled with the wisdom about the theatre which he has gleaned in the course of his unique career.

Sergeant Paul E. Tullius, formerly of Carmel, now stationed at Hammond Field, Fresno, took as his bride Miss Alice MacGreggor of that city in a double ring ceremony performed on November 25 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacGreggor in Chowchilla.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Richard Britch and Sergeant Wales Hobson was best man.

The new Mrs. Tullius received voice training at the Chicago Conservatory of Music and has been a member of the faculty at Roosevelt high school, Fresno, where she taught music and conducted the Roosevelt choir.

Sergeant and Mrs. Tullius plan to make their home in Carmel after the war.

Major Kocher On Leave

Major R. A. Kocher was in town the early part of the week on leave from Fort Lewis, Washington, military hospital where he is chief of staff of the medical division. He was enthusiastic about the equipment and personel he has to work with "the best in the world." His recent study of malaria derived from observing and treating 700 cases is the subject of a paper soon to be published in the Journal for the Rocky Mountain Division of the Medical Association, a group he addressed several months ago while he was assistant chief of staff at the Denver Military Hospital.

His wife and daughter who have been living near Fort Lewis plan to return to Carmel when his unit is sent over-seas.

Lt. John Campbell Here

Lt. John Campbell arrived in Carmel on Monday evening to be present at the interment services held the following morning for his father, the late Argyll Campbell. Lt. Campbell, now on patrol duty with the U. S. Navy Air Force in the South Atlantic, has been granted a two-week leave. Mrs. John Campbell, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Alton Walker in Pebble Beach, met her husband's plane in San Francisco. His brother, Lt. Gordon Campbell, returned on Wednesday to Washington, D. C., where he is a member of the legal staff of the U. S. Navy.

Commander Murphy Home

Commander John W. Murphy, Jr., U.S.N. arrived home from Australia via plane on Wednesday, in time for a Thanksgiving reunion with Mrs. Murphy, his two young daughters, Paula and Joann and his father-in-law Paul Prince. Mrs. Murphy journeyed to San Francisco to meet his plane and accompany him back to Carmel. This is Commander Murphy's first visit home in over a year.

USO Thanksgiving Party

No less than 1600 service men partook of the Thanksgiving hospitality offered by the Carmel USO last week, where a buffet dinner, largely contributed by local merchants and citizens, was served amid tasteful decorations that carried the mood of the season.

Under the leadership of Miss K. Helen McKinstry, USO director, the following committees gave generously of their time to make the occasion highly successful:

Decorations, Mrs. Chloe Wilson and Mrs. Ruth Hill Cooke as general supervisors, with Miss Hazel Dale, assistant director, aided by Junior Hostesses Muriel Brust, Ann Messing, Meta and Rose Gossler, largely responsible for the decorations of the dance hall.

Mrs. Willard McGraw was chairman of the Senior Hostesses, including Mrs. George Stuart, Mrs. Helen Kreps, Mrs. D. Jordan, Mrs. Katherine Bradley, Mrs. G. Howden, Mrs. R. P. Brush, Mrs. Hugh Comstock, Mrs. J. Dickinson, Mrs. Charles Fonteneau, Mrs. R. Diekemper, Miss Alma Edler, Mrs. Charles Watson, Mrs. C. Sloane, Mrs. Joseph McEldowney, Miss Betty Cole, Miss Minnie Phillips, Miss Glenna Peck, Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Helen Willard, Mrs. Reardon, Mrs. Agnes Rushworth, Mrs. E. H. Ewig, Mrs. Barre and Miss Irene Carter.

Cadet Gardner at Wooster

Aviation Cadet Harvey Gardner, son of Mrs. F. E. Dowgiallo, completed his Tarmac training at Livermore on November 20 and arrived in Wooster, Ohio, on Thanksgiving morning to begin an eleven-weeks' course in the naval pre-flight preparatory school there. This is Cadet Gardner's second consecutive Thanksgiving dinner away from home; as last year he was twenty miles ahead of the main construction crew on the Alaskan-Canadian highway.

Birthday Dance

The home of Mrs. Edith Greenan on Ladera Drive was the scene last Saturday night of a younger-set dancing party hosted by her son, Owen Greenan. The secret that Saturday was also Owen's birthday leaked out somehow, and his guests came bearing two beautiful and unexpected gifts. Those assembled to enjoy the dancing and refreshments of cake, cookies and punch were Peggy Riker, Betty Dougherty, Jeannette Reel, Biz Carr, Nancy Anderson, Katherine Van Houten, Edith Elizalde, Beverly Dowgiallo, Shirley Petty, Rod Dewar, Mike Monahan, Curtis Gorham, Murray Wight, Lou Earl McCreery, Bob Rissel, Stephen Brooks, Bob Barry and Bill Hodgen.

All Saints' Bazaar

Plans are now complete for the All Saints' Church Bazaar and luncheon to be held on Saturday, December 4 at the Parish House. The bazaar will open at 10 a.m. and the luncheon will take place between 12:30 and 1:30. Decorations are in charge of Miss Flora Stewart and the hostess is Mrs. George Burton. Serving is in charge of a committee composed of Mrs. C. F. H. Jarvis, Mrs. Pliny Holt, Mrs. E. K. Smith, Mrs. F. H. Hall, Mrs. F. E. Bumgarner, Mrs. L. A. Quinn and Mrs. C. J. Hulsewe. The Cradle and Cupboard committee includes the Mesdames W. R. Thomas, R. C. Weller, J. F. Gray, R. M. A. Davis, G. R. Taggart, L. D. Burkhalter, B. Gravatt, W. A. Niswinger, J. G. Orr, W. E. Guthrie and W. H. Hodgekin. The Counter committee includes Mrs. R. R. Wallace, Mrs. V. P. Millis and Mrs. Cowan Wood, assisted by the following girls of St. Margaret's Altar Guild: Sue Dekker, Pat Post, DuVal Roberts and Peggy Riker. Miss Sue Smith will take tickets for the luncheon.

L. A. Newcomers

Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. L. Franklin came from Los Angeles recently to make their home in Carmel, Mrs. Franklin's decision to live here some day having been inspired by a visit in 1928. For many years the family lived in British Honduras, where Mr. Franklin was sub-manager of a large wood-cutting and exporting firm, dealing chiefly in dye woods and mahogany.

Woman's Club Meets

The Carmel Woman's Club will meet on Monday, December 6, at 2 p.m. in their new quarters in the Girl Scout House, on Lincoln and Sixth streets. Newton Hereford Bell, noted lecturer, commentator and analyst of international affairs, has been secured to speak, thus promising the members a program of unusual interest.

Mr. Bell, a native of San Francisco, received his education here and in France, and during World War I served overseas with the 147th Machine Gun Battalion. Since 1939 he has been a commentator of war areas in Europe, Asia and Africa, winning the World War Medal in the U. S. and the Palmes Academiques in France. He is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of Great Britain, of the Explorers' Club, New York, and of the American Legion. Mr. Bell speaks five languages and has done publicity work in Mexico, Russia, and with both the Chinese and Japanese armies in Manchuria. He is reported to be a brilliant and humorous speaker. His lecture on Monday will be on one of his non-war topics. Guests of the Woman's club on this occasion will be the members of the Girl Scout Council.

Mission Wedding

Miss Jean Noone of San Francisco became the bride of Charles Jordan, also of that city, at a quiet ceremony performed on Saturday evening, November 27, in the Carmel Mission by Father Michael O'Connell.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Agnes Rushworth was hostess at a dinner for the entire bridal party, given in her apartment at Dolores and Seventh streets.

After a honeymoon spent in Carmel, at Colonial Terrace, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will return to San Francisco, where Mr. Jordan is now engaged in defense work.

Overtime—one and one-half (1½) times the above rates.

Sundays and holidays (except watchmen, guards and flagmen)—one and one-half (1½) times the above rates.

The rates of wages, including overtime, holiday or Sunday rates, above specified are subject to the effect, if applicable hereto, of executive orders of the President of the United States No. 9240, dated September 9, 1942, and No. 9250, dated October 3, 1942, and to any modification thereof and to any and all lawful orders of the President or any other authorized Federal officer or agency, insofar as the same may be applicable to this contract. In case of any inconsistency, the rates fixed by any such applicable Federal order, whether higher or lower, shall control.

In accordance with the provisions of Section 1777.5 of the Labor Code, as amended by Chapter 971, Statutes of 1939, and in accordance with the regulations of the California Apprenticeship Council, properly indentured apprentices may be employed in the prosecution of the work.

In accordance with the provisions of the State Contract Act, prospective bidders must file with the Department of Public Works answers to questions contained in a standard form of questionnaire and financial statement including a complete statement of their financial ability and experience in performing public works. Standard forms of such questionnaire and financial statement can be obtained from the State Highway Engineer at his office, Public Works Building, Sacramento. The Department of Public Works will not furnish proposal forms to prospective bidders who have not submitted such questionnaire and financial statement for prequalification at least five days prior to the date fixed for publicly opening sealed bids and been prequalified for at least one day prior to said date.

No bid will be accepted from a Contractor who is not licensed in accordance with the law, under the provisions of Chapter 791, Statutes of 1929, as amended, or Chapter 37, Statutes of 1939, as amended, or to whom a proposal form has not been issued by the Department of Public Works.

Plans may be seen, and forms of proposal, bonds, contract, and specifications may be obtained at the office of the State Highway Engineer, Public Works Building, Sacramento, California, and they may be seen at the offices of the District Engineers at Los Angeles and San Francisco, at the office of the District Engineer of the district in which the work is situ-

Dixie Land, and following it with Yankee Doodle and the Battle Hymn of the Republic. And then "Miss Susie" and "Miss Minnie"—married ladies whom we all spoke of in that way—found two men with good voices and formed a quartet to give us Kipling's Recessional.

Delightful as all this was, we youngsters were still awaiting the supreme joy of the evening. After some nudging on the part of others, one whispers to Mrs. Silva, "Please ask Mr. Silva to dance Solomon Levi." The request is made, and William consents. Then his wife, Caroline, that lovely woman whom we all adored, sat at the piano, her head thrown back, and with joyful abandon played and sang that old tune "Solomon Levi," while Mr. Silva, with the utmost lightness and grace, danced before our enraptured eyes. And when, kicking high, he touched the glittering prisms of the chandelier, our delight knew no bounds. There was tumultuous and ecstatic applause from the entire juvenile audience.

To us it was the great treat of all such occasions. When that was over, we could be persuaded to go home, and to bed. And to some of us was granted a little more bliss. In our night visions there appeared a whirling, dancing, flamboyant figure, tossing pinwheels to the stars.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, December 5, on the subject, "God the Only Cause and Creator." The Golden Text will be: "Every house is builded by some man; but he that built all things is God," (Hebrew 3:4).

Bible selections will include the following passage from I Corinthians 8: 5, 6 (to ;): "For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "In Science man is the offspring of Spirit. The beautiful, good, and pure constitute his ancestry. . . . Spirit is his primitive and ultimate source of being; God is his Father, and Life is the law of his being." (p. 63).

You Belong to Me, Nothing But the Truth at Playhouse

Relaxing from the thrills and chills of British-made "Missing Ten Days," whose success calls for an early repeat engagement, the Playhouse is now offering the hilarious "You Belong to Me," in which Barbara Stanwyck, as a woman physician, keeps Henry Fonda, her film husband, ludicrously miserable. This comedy will finish Sunday, to be followed Tuesday by another equally mirth-provoking, "Nothing But the Truth," with Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard.

Hope's career has had its ups and downs but this rollicking affair is still rated as his best.

Pine Needles

New AWVS Home

New headquarters of the American Women's Voluntary Services have been opened in Carmel, in the La Giralda Building on Dolores street, next to the Wood Pharmacy, and the organization plans to establish another Counsellor Bureau for the service wives who are located in this district.

One of the busiest departments of the A.W.V.S. is the Service Wives Counsellor Bureau. Its object is to help the wives of the service men in adjusting themselves to the community. Many of the women are far from home and do not know where to turn for friendly advice; or they may need a job or a home, or an allotment may be overdue; some want to know where they can do war work; others may be interested in our local history and places of interest. Honeymoons have been planned, and furlough vacations. Whatever the problem, the Bureau finds the answer if it is possible.

Molly Murphy O'Brien Here

Mrs. Stuart O'Brien, the former Molly Murphy, gifted piano pupil of David Alberto, arrived from her home in Hollywood to visit over the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Murphy of Salinas and her sister, Mrs. Eric Van Zandt of Carmel. Stuart O'Brien is at present working in the Warner Brothers Studios in Hollywood, and Mrs. O'Brien is reported working upon a children's symphony for which a performance has been promised by the same orchestral group which presented her earlier composition.

A.A.U.W. Meeting

Mrs. Ted Durein of Carmel will be one of the reviewers at the regular meeting of the Book Section of the local branch of the American Association of University Women, which will meet Tuesday evening, December 7 at the home of Dr. Margaret Swigart, 187 Oceanview Ave., Pacific Grove. Mrs. Durein will discuss Thomas Barbour's new book, "Naturalist at Large." On the same program Dr. Laetitia Snow will review "The Little Locksmith," by Katharine Butler Hathaway. Both books have appeared serially in The Atlantic Monthly, and are current favorites with the reading public. A.A.U.W. members and their friends are invited to join in the meeting, which will also include a round-table on Christmas literature.

SALVAGE CHAIRMAN ASKS CO-OPERATION OF PEOPLE

on the Monterey dump.

The need for your tin cans is a real one and it seems a small thing to ask that you give them and the few extra seconds to prepare them so that they may be used. It is a war effort that few can find an excuse for not making.

Chest Drive Heads Express Gratitude For Co-operation

With almost $72,000 in the Peninsula War Chest, whose quota was $64,400, Carmel showed a warm quick response that was a tribute to the generosity of its citizens, according to War Chest officials. Carmel almost trebled its last year's Chest gifts.

On Wednesday Brig. Gen. Harry D. Chamberlain presented a check for some $2600 to Marian Todd, Community Chest Executive Secretary, as Fort Ord's local contribution, the other half being credited to Salinas. Del Monte Preflight school had previously contributed over $3000.

"Several things stand out in our local Drive, which also includes the Highlands, the Valley and Pebble Beach," said Willard Wheeler, County Vice Chairman, with Peninsula supervision. "In a campaign like Carmel's we of course deeply appreciate and vitally need the larger contributions, one of which was for $1500, still, scores of smaller gifts that were for double or treble must have been given at a real sacrifice.

"To the 100 house-to-house canvassers and their district captains goes our renewed appreciation. To give both money and time to a patriotic cause is the real test of citizenship. In the business section we feel indebted to the fine work of James Doud who ably supported Mayor McCreery of the Campaign Committee, as also did Mrs. Frances Hudgins in the residential sections. Norman Larson, in the Highlands, and Mrs. Dwight Morrow in the Valley did outstanding work as Chairmen. Richard Keff ably assisted in Peninsula publicity.

"As we end this campaign may I add this thought. The burden of the work is not distributed among enough leaders. Too few men and women lend their time, brains and prestige to such a cause. Volunteer leaders are vitally needed, especially among the business men and women; yes, more and younger leaders to take the place of the older ones who are slowed down by age or health. May the next Chest Drive change this situation."

A generous contribution of a $100 painting to be disposed of for the benefit of the Chest was made by the Carmel artist, William Silva.

The sixth and last Honor Roll follows: Dr. and J. B. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Godwin, Mrs. Clair Foster, Bank of Carmel, Martha A. Chickering, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Stubbs and Miss Amy Campbell.
